PREFACE

The appearance of the Quality Assurance Programme Directory of quality assurance interests is a reflection both of the growing number of practitioners with an active interest in the area of quality assurance and the increased demand upon the Quality Assurance Information Service for help in establishing contacts across authorities and professional interests in this field. As such, this first edition of the Directory is experimental and rudimentary. As a working directory we hope to develop and tailor its usefulness over time in response to the requirements of its users. However we hope that in its present form it will provide an easy to use reference guide to the field of quality assurance and those working within it.

A core function of the Quality Assurance Programme is to promote and disseminate good practice and to provide a national resource for the exchange of information in this field. To achieve this we have built up an extensive network of individuals involved in quality assurance matters and maintain a comprehensive mailing list as an essential element of our work. In doing so it has become apparent that this information could also be useful to a wide range of people, particularly quality assurance practitioners and health service managers.

In fulfilling the essential function of the Quality Assurance Programme, which is to provide wide-ranging information about quality assurance and related matters we rely heavily upon the willingness of individuals to share their experiences with us, and through us other practitioners. This Directory is an excellent example of the generosity of practitioners as the great majority of entries come directly from individuals and managers, and our particular thanks go to those District General Managers who have been able to take time out to reply to our requests for information. Indeed we have been surprised by the richness and variety of responses, and we look forward to seeing the document grow in future editions.

INTRODUCTION

The entries in the Directory have been supplied by individual practitioners and managers, as well as being drawn from the records of the Quality Assurance Information Service and a wide variety of other published sources. The aim in producing the document has been to offer a quick reference tool for practitioners and others to indicate the sorts of people working in the 'quality' area and their level of interest. Although a number of people are mentioned as having some degree of interest in quality, this should not be regarded as a full listing but rather as a selection so that, for instance, if you do not find an entry for a given Health Authority that may not mean that no one is working in the quality area, simply that we did not receive any entries. In addition, the focus of entries is upon the specific individual rather than his or her post, so that unnamed posts have been included only where we have been requested to do so. We appreciate that a shortcoming of this edition of the directory is that the professional background is not indicated; however attempts have been made to identify non- NHS groupings.

The arrangement used in this Directory is a simple one and is based upon our need for mailing list type information. For this reason each entry consists of a name, address and a level of interest code. There are four of these codes and a key is given on each page. There are two sequences of names. The first is alphabetical by individual's names and the second sequence is based on the NHS geographical arrangement together with a number of special groups (eg. academics) — the order of these can be found in the contents list.

As already mentioned we realise that this Directory is in itself, of limited value — both because it does not indicate the professional background of individuals or more particularly because it does not indicate their areas of interest, or in what projects they are involved. However it is hoped that other services offered by the Quality Assurance Programme and the Quality Assurance Information Service will supplement the information given in the Directory. For example, details of current activities and projects are now included in the Quality Assurance Information Service database which forms an integral part of DHSS-DATA, and a selection of these items are published regularly in Quality Assurance Abstracts. Anyone wishing to know more about these and other services should write to the Assistant Information Officer at the Quality Assurance Programme, King's Fund Centre for Health Services Development, 126 Albert Street, London NW1 7NF. In keeping with our aim to make our services as 'user friendly' and 'user valuable' as possible we would welcome feedback on this document and would hope to incorporate whatever changes proved to be practical or possible into future editions.

As with many of our services, this Directory is highly dependent upon the willingness of practitioners to provide us with information and to share their experiences with us and other practitioners. If you are not mentioned in this Directory we invite you to submit an entry for future editions using the form included at the end of this section. Please feel free to make as many photocopies of the form as are required. Similarly if details of your Directory entry have changed then please could you inform us again using the form at the end of this section. Completed forms should be sent to the Information Officer at the address given.

We anticipate that this is the first edition of this Directory and that we will continue to update it annually. We hope to check the continuing validity of the information in entries with individuals at least once a year. In between editions we will maintain an up-to-date database of entries.

Anne Holdich Stodulski
Information Officer, Quality Assurance Programme

DIRECTORY OF QUALITY ASSURANCE INTERESTS : 1989

One of the difficulties for most people working in the quality assurance area is to make contact with other people who have an interest in the subject. the aim of the directory is to go some way to providing a basic mechanism to meet this need and to maintain the information and provide regular updates. Information in the 1989 edition of the directory was first developed from our records, from lists and relevant databases held by other organisations, or from submissions from individuals. This information was then offered for checking at Health Authority level just prior to publication. Where possible we will try to make an annual check on the veracity of the information in individual entries.

If you wish to submit an entry for future editions of the Directory, or if you wish to amend your existing details please complete and return this form to : Information Officer, Quality Assurance Programme, King's Fund Centre for Health Services Development, 126 Albert Street, London NW1 7NF. Please feel free to photocopy this form.

Please type or write in black ink using block capitals — this will ensure that your details are correctly transcribed.
